It was Saturday, 8 August, 1988 that Winters morning was the coldest of the year
 "Isn't it cold?" said Jonathon.

Anastasia, his sister, suggested, "Let's go skating on the pond."

The children arrived at the pond. A large sign said the ice was too thin for skating. Jonathon read the sign, but he took no notice of it.
 "You'll fall in," warned Anastasia.
 "Don't be a scaredy cat," said Jonathon, stepping onto the ice.

Anastasia looked in horror as her brother disappeared under the water. He resurfaced screaming for help. Luckily Anastasia's skipping rope was still in her backpack. She threw it to Jonathon. When he grabbed hold of it, she pulled him out.

The next morning, Jonathon sat grumpily with his feet in a tub of hot water.
 "I'm going skating," said Anastasia.
 "Sniffle," said Jonathon.
 It was all that he could say.
