A crow found a peace of cheese. It looked good and fresh to. She flew up on to a tree branch she wanted to eat the cheese there in piece. A fox was walking near by. He looked up and seen the crow. He were a very hungry fox. He hadn't eaten anything for to days. He decided he would try to trick the crow and steal the cheese off her. He spoke to her about her beauty. The crow didn't say nothing. She knew that if she replied she would drop the cheese. The fox said he thought that crows were the most intelligent of all the birds. The crow still said nothing. 'Sing to me in your beautiful voice,' said the fox. The crow was so flattered that she sung to him. The moment she done this the cheese fell from her beak. The fox gobbled it up and run off.
